Dear [redacted]

We thank you for your recent emails.
According to our computer database, we have not yet received your completed application forms. Could you please tell us when you sent in the forms and you birth date so that we can review our incoming files? Thank you.

With regard to your questions, you might consider viewing our Internet web site which provides a great amount of information on what the World Government of World Citizens (WGWC) is doing and what it is about. Take a look, for example, at the the "Ellsworth Declaration" as a fundamental document on the World Government.

As human beings and world citizens of the World Government, we accept as a priori the position of totality or political holism. We are living in one world and we are one human family, our technology, our communications, our society, our economy and our politics must recognize this fact. In fact, in almost all areas of human life we accept the world as one: we know that a hole in the ozone can kill us wherever we are on the planet, we know that we can send a fax or email around the world in miliseconds, we know that governments and corporations can violate human rights across supposed frontiers. Yet why do so many people have a vested interest in the 18th century nation-state politics? Why have human politics not advanced to the almost 21st century with the other human endeavors? Because national governmental leaders want to maintain their power in the status quo system, their ability to use violent force as a final resolution to conflict.

There are plenty of organizations already dealing with the issues (in your questions 1 and 2) that you raise on a national level, with ineffective and partial national politics. The World Government of World Citizens is focusing on the big problem, which is war and violence perpetuated by national governments and by exclusive and belligerent identification with various belief systems or ideologies. Until we outlaw war and violence, the other problems will not matter.

People often ask "What is the World Government doing about overpopulation or the environment, etc.?" We concentrate on the major problem of war because, in the nuclear age, if we as a human race do not resolve this problem,the other problems will not exist tomorrow. In other words,if we destroy the planet and ourselves, we as individuals and we as humanity will not exist and neither will our human problems.

With regard to your third question, the WSA(R) and the WGWC assists individuals in understanding and claiming our human rights. By knowing our rights, we are empowered to change our governmental institutions so that these institutions will respect our rights. With this knowledge of our rights, we can counteract the anti-democratic forces in the world.

Almost 400,000 WSA Passports have been issued since the first was issued in 1954 when the World Service Authority(R) was founded. Every year approximately 20,000 individuals request the passport and other WSA documentation. The WSA has issued millions of documents when you include the World ID, World Birth Certificate, World Citizen Card, International Exit Visa, International Residence Permit, World Marriage Certificate, etc.
If you have other questions, comments or suggestions, please contact us.
We appreciate your interest and look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,
David Gallup, Esq.
